Dear [redacted]

Today is your last day with us. When you first accepted an appointment as my Special Assistant at the FBI, I doubt that you contemplated all that was in store for you. But neither did I. We have all gone through a challenging, interesting and even exciting transition. I appreciate all that you have done above and beyond the call of duty to help make that transition successful. The FBI was fortunate to have you, the CIA has been fortunate to have you, and I have been richly rewarded by your efforts in my behalf.

We're going to miss you, your warm smile, your professional competence, and your can-do spirit. You will find all of these assets equally effective in Texas, even though Washington will be the loser for your going.

I wish you, [redacted] and your growing family all things good in the years ahead. If ever I can be of help to you, you have only to pick up the phone and call.

Sincerely,

Bill

Dear Judge Webster,

As you know, my last day as your Special Assistant will be tomorrow, May 26.

Serving as your Special Assistant at both the FBI and the CIA has been a unique and professionally-rewarding experience. You have broadened my horizons and honed my analytical skills. Throughout my career, I will look back upon my tenure under your leadership with great pride.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve as your Special Assistant. It has been a pleasure and an honor working for you.

Sincerely,
